THE WEDDING.

The Goldfinch gave the bride away,
Who promis'd always to obey.

PREPARING FOR THE FEAST:

The feathery tenants of the air,
Towards the Feast each gave a share.

THE DINNER.

The jovial party din'd together,
And fine & pleasant was the weather.

THE CONCERT.

The Nightingale was then call'd on,
To give the company a song.

frequent wood,
Where lonely died two babes
for want of food ;
The pitying Red-Breasts all their sorrows feel,
And with green boughs their tender limbs conceal.

children at last obtain relief from all their distresses by the indulgent interposition of that kind Father who never fails to administer comfort to the sons and daughters of affliction. I call it comfort when the Almighty calls good children out of this world, to be infinitely more happy in another; and surely death must have been welcome to these children, who
